POETRY.

Be kind to the loved ones at Home.
Be kind to thy Father—for when thou art young,
Who loved thee most fondly than he?
I caught the first necklace that fell from thy tongue,
And joined in thy innocent glee.
Be kind to thy father, for now he is old,
His locks intermingled with grey,
His footsteps are feeble, once fearless and bold;
The father is passing away.

Be kind to thy Mother—for lo! on her brow
May traces of sorrow be seen;
Oh, well mayst thou comfort and cherish her now,
For gentle and kind has she been.

Remember thy mother, for then she will pray,
As long as God giveth her breath;

With accents of kindness then cheer her lone way,
Even to the dark valley of death.

Be kind to thy Brother—his heart will have dearth
If the smile of thy joy be withdrawn;
The flowers of feeling will fade at their birth,
If the view of affection be gone.

Be kind to thy brother, wherever you are;

The love of a brother should be

An ornament purer and richer, by far,

Than pearls from the depth of the sea.

Be kind to thy Sister—and many may know
The depths of true sisterly love;

The wealth of the ocean lies fathoms below
The surface that sparkles above.

Be kind to thy father, once fearless and bold,
Be kind to thy mother, so near;

Be kind to thy brother, nor show thy heart cold,
Be kind to thy sister so dear.

LITERATURE.

The Lost Boy.

It was night; very dark. After the hunt, the hunters were asleep, with their feet to the fire, and their dogs coiled up comfortably round the blazing log-pile.

It was night; very dark night. Only the "White Cloud" was awake, keeping the watch in his return; now lying down, wrapped in his blanket, now rising stealthily to feed the flame, to listen to some unaccustomed noise, to do his work, be what it might be sooner, for the night, but never sleeping, never dozing for an instant.

Suddenly he started, and as he did so, the eldest of the deer-hounds raised his head from his paws, between which it had been crouched, pricked his ears sharply, and uttered a low, smothered growl; and yet, there was no sound on the faint western air that could have made the slightest impression on the hunter, whose blood was purely white.

The "White Cloud" rose, and gathering up a heap of dead wet leaves and earth, threw them upon the fire, thereby to quell the gleam and glitter; and, thus being done, loosened his knife in the scabbard, looked to the lock of his rifle, and then, without tumult or disturbance, stole into the camp, laid his hand on Harry Archer's shoulder, and, as he rose quietly at the touch, from his slumbers, said in a calm, low voice, "best be up, tell you; canoe come quick. May-be good—tink not—any how, best be up!"

The other Indian had risen to his feet even before Harry, although he had not been especially summoned, but Frank continued to sleep soundly until his friend stirred him with the butt of his rifle, and he, too, started up, and being informed of what was in prospect, prepared himself for whatever might follow.

By this time the clash of the paddles was distinctly audible on the still night air, and it soon became evident that a canoe was making for the island from the nearest mainland, at a point very near to that where their own backs were beached, directed probably by the glare of the watch-fire, which streamed upward far above the dusky tree-tops.

So soon as this was evident, a short council was held, and it was determined to advance and meet the intruders on the margin of the water, where they would have the advantage of light, rather than to encounter them in the gloomy vaults of the forest.

The Indians, though brave and fearless, were impressed strongly with the idea that danger was at hand, although Harry scouted the idea, asking them, who on earth was to molest them in time of profound peace, or what possible cause there was for apprehending an attack.

"May-be bad Indian," said the "White Cloud," shaking his head doubtfully. "Maybe Mohawk come."

For it is a strange fact, and indicative of the greatest renown of that once powerful and martial tribe, that throughout all the northern Indians, from the Chippewas and Pottawatomies of Lake Huron and Superior, to the Penobscots of Maine, and the Micmacs and the Maliseets of New Brunswick; that the name of Mohawk is still held in almost superstitious awe, although since the old French war, and the conquest of Canada, this pusillanimous and feeble remnant, whose council fire is still burning at the head of the Grand River, near Brantford, in Western Canada.

Archer knew the absurdity of the superstition, but he also knew the tenacity and tenacity of the Indian character when any of their superstitions are assailed, and he made no resistance, but prepared his weapons, and followed the Indians quietly to the shore.

The Indian had just risen above the tops of the hills, and was pouring a flood of lustre over the rocks and water; making everything, with the shadows of the forest, almost as bright as day, though around the thicket and verdurous evergreens darkness still arched.

In the skirt of the wood, therefore, and under the shadow of the thickly feathered hemlock, our hunter paused, ready for either fortune, with a strip of gravelly beach interspersed with rocky fragments, stretching some ten or twelve yards between them and the water.

THE NEW ERA.

NEWARK, Friday, Dec. 1st, 1854.

LOCAL MATTER.

A general copy of parliamentary papers heretofore supplied as by Journal Bazaar, Esq., &c., for which, see the thanks.

Those of our subscribers who propose to pay for the Erana West, will oblige by delivering it immediately. Cold weather is at hand.

We understand the next sittings of the Provincial Court will be held at the Court House, Newmarket, on the 16th inst., before His Honour, Judge, Barker.

We direct attention to an advertisement in this day's News of Mr. Barber, Esq., who has fitted up his shop at considerable expense, and is now prepared to receive calls from the Shoemakers town.

We have received a copy of a Bill introduced by Mr. Hartman, to enable Mechanics and Builders to loan on buildings the tools needed for repairing. A synopsis will be published next week.

We direct the attention of the new advertisement of Messrs. T. Brown & Co. of Toronto. Currants at 2d per lb. is cheap, for these fruits. Accompanying this advertisement, we have acknowledged the receipt of a sum of five *Mic*l. prepared by a celebrated house in Halifax.

We regret to announce that our old friend and neighbor, Mr. Barber, has extremely ill of a fever. For several weeks he has been confined to his bed; and for the last ten days confined to his bed. We make this announcement, as many friends at a distance, perhaps, are not aware of the fact, that would like to know.

The Reform Central Vigilance Committee held their next meeting on Wednesday evening, the 27th inst., in their Room, Newmarket. A general question of importance will be brought up for consideration, it is particularly requested that as many of the committee as possible should attend. Meeting at half-past seven in m.

CONVERSATIONISTS.—We have received a letter from an individual in Uxbridge, concerning some strictures upon a letter of mine which appeared in the Ontario Reporter.

Upon our being in error in stating that the letter was written by the Member for North Ontario, as his name does not appear, claims the honor, and we are ready to make the correction. Let our friends, as generally applied, be correct. We should in such an communication, but for one thing: we have no time to re-write the correspondence in order, and in its present state it presents a very bad appearance, and in the production appears as if it had been written by the same master hand, not confined to the Reporter. We are, therefore, not so perfect for the character of the writer, as will appear from the public. It requires us of an old article about the best writing up a tree—the right way.

The communication of our Quebec Correspondent seems to have entirely too late for this issue. It will appear next week.

General Summary.

Mr. Alfred McNam has signified his desire to, let us now, the four or five principal measures now before the House, be settled, he will be willing to have the Legislature prorogued.

Several daring burglaries have been committed in Toronto, during the past few weeks; but as yet, the parties have gone without detection. The Toronto papers seem to think, at least, that is the inference, that some of the constables or police force are to be blamed. Strange fires, when law-preservers are not lawless.

We learned yesterday that the Wood House adjoining the Thorndale Depot, was destroyed by fire on the evening of the 29th ult. Of the timeliness of the above we cannot speak definitely.

TORONTO MARKETS.

Toronto Nov. 30, 1854.
Toronto Markets for the past week have been plentifully supplied. Flour 2d a 3d 2d; Wheat 2d a 3d 2d; Beef per 100 lbs. 2d a 2d 1d; Pork per lb. 2d 1d a 2d; Oats 3d per bushel. Peas 2d 1d; Potatoes 2d a 2d; Turnips 1d 1d 1d; Geese 2d a 2d 1d each; Pigs per pair 1d 1d 1d; Wool 1d 1d 1d per pound. Firewood Twenty-five Shillings per cord.

Mariners.

By the Rev. Father McNulty, at the Roman Catholic Church, Newmarket, on Monday, the 27th ult. Mr. Hawley to Miss Mary Howard, both of this place.

Wid.

On the 28th ult. Mrs. Ann Evans, daughter of Mr. C. Evans of the Township of King, aged 23 years.

Law Respecting Newspapers.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.

2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their periodicals, the publisher may send them until all arrears are paid; and the subscriber is responsible for all the numbers sent.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their periodicals from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible till they have settled their bill and order their periodicals to be discontinued. Bending numbers back, or leaving them in the office, is not such notice of discontinuance as the law requires.

4. If subscribers remove to other place without informing the publisher, and their periodicals are sent to the former direction they are held responsible.

AMUSEMENT.

Has she any Tin?

O, do not paint her charms to me,
I know that she is fair!
Now her lips might tempt the bee,
Her eyes with stars compare.
Such transient gifts I never could prize;
My heart they could not win!
I do not scorn my Mary's eye,
But—has she any tin?

The fairest cheek, as I may sooth,
Bedecked the teeth of years—
The eyes that light and gladness played,
May soon grow dim with tears.
I would love's fire should, at the last,
Still burn as they begin;
But beauty's reign so soon in past,
Has she any tin?

A poor comet having got his skull fractured, was told by the doctor that the brain was visible, on which he remarked—"Do write to tell father, for he always said I had none!"

A friend who is collecting statistics on the subject of the Game Laws, is anxious to know if a lady angling for compliments comes within the meaning of any of the acts of parliament against poaching.

A New Orleans paper tells us of a man who has worn out four pairs of boots in trying to collect the money to pay for them. Really these are tides to try men's soles.

YOUNG AMERICA.—Tommy my son, run to the store and get me some sugar. Excuse me, ma, I am somewhat indisposed this morning. Send father, and tell him to bring me a plug of tobacco.

WHAT IS LOVE?—An American Johnson is ready with the definition—"A prodigal deity on the part of a young man to pay some young woman's board."

Papa, can a person catch anything if he don't run after it? No. Well then, how did you catch that cold you have got? By running after your mother to bring her home from the Woman's Rights Meeting.

MISS ELLEN, allow me to close those blinds; the glare of the sun must be oppressive.

You are very kind, Mr. J. McM—but I would rather have a little sun than no air at all.

Do you you go in for the Maine Liquor Law?

Why, partly yes, and partly no—I goes for the liquor, but not for the law.

BOY, what is your father doing to-day? Well I spose he's failin', I hurn him tell mother yesterday, to go round to the shops and get trusted all she could—and do it right off, too—for he'd got everything ready to fail up to nothing, ceptin' that.

A celebrated Evangelical preacher once told us, pleasantly, that when he was unmarried the young ladies of his congregation were indefatigable in hemming cravats, handkerchiefs, &c., for him; but, he added, with marked emphasis, "Since I have had a wife I have not even had one to do it for me."

If you wish to ascertain the temper of a young lady, look at her nails, and the tips of her gloves. If they are jagged and much bitten, you may be sure she is peevish, irritable—quarrelsome—and too ready to show her teeth at the slightest provocation: This is an infallible test that every ill-tempered young lady carries at her fingers' ends.

CAUGHT FOUR.—A bachelor friend of ours passing up the street yesterday, picked up a thimble. He stood for moment meditating on the probable owner, when, pressing it to his lips he said—oh, that it was the fair lips of the owner. Just as he had finished, a big, fat, ugly, black wench, looked out of an upper window and said,—Boss, jis please to srow da bimble in the entry; I jis drap it! Our friend fainted.

FURGUSON AND HIS WIFE.—James Ferguson and his wife led a cat-and-dog life, and she is not once alluded to in the philosopher's autobiography. About the year 1750, one evening, while he was delivering to a London audience a lecture on astronomy, his wife entered the room in a passion, and maliciously overturned several pieces of the apparatus; when all the notice Ferguson took of the catastrophe was the observation to the audience, "Ladies and gentlemen, I have the misfortune to be married to this woman."

A TRIFLING AFFAIR.—A Western editor thus notices a little event which transpired in his family on the 4th of July last: "Private and confidential.—Joy to the world! Sound the swaying! The event happened on the glorious birthday of American Independence! It will add new lustre to the 4th of July in after ages!! It is an uncommon noun!! singular number!!! masculine gender!!!!—And it shall be called George Washington Jefferson Jackson Hancock Tom Benton Martin Van Buren Quincy Adams Benjamin Franklin Fourth of July Jenks, so it shall."

"WORDS ARE THINGS."—Yes, and some times very dangerous things, too. They are like fire-arms, and should be handled very carefully. Have a care of your words, you may hurt somebody when you do not mean to.

A man's "grub" may often depend upon his neighbor's grammar, an accusation of horrible sins may grow out of nothing but syntax. A worthy clergyman came near losing his "fixings" in this way, and a man's living is the next thing to his life. It happened thus: The minister's name was mentioned in terms of eulogy, one evening at a social gathering in his parish, when a person present, a solemn-faced, wagtail fellow, of convivial habits, observed that he quite agreed with the rest in their praise of Mr. A.

FROM THE SPIRIT WORLD.—The following is reported as a true message from a certain individual now in the "Spirit World," as we have been told:—

Rapper.—John Jones?

Spirit of John Jones answers two raps.

R.—Are you happy?

S.—Yes, in all but one thing.

R.—What is that?

S.—I left the world without calling on the printer, as I promised. O, if I could but return to the earth, I would do,—

R.—Do what?

S.—Call on the poor "Printer," and pay him them four dollars; but it is entirely too late.

R.—No; send a message to your once fond wife to pay it for you, and then you will be happy!

S.—Yes, yes! tell her if she wishes to enjoy eternal happiness, to go at once and discharge that debt, and everlasting bliss is mine.

R.—I will do as you bid me.

ANECDOTE OF HOGARTH.—A few months before this ingenious artist was exiled with the malady which deprived the world of one of its most distinguished ornaments, he proposed for his matchless pencil the work he has entitled a "Tall Peacock"—the first idea of which is said to have been started in company, while the convivial glass was circulating around his own table.

"My next undertaking," said Hogarth, "shall be the end of all things."

"If that is the case," replied one of his friends, "your business will be finished for there will be an end of the painter."

"There will be so," answered Hogarth sighing heavily, "and therefore this, sooner or later, is done to the better."

Accordingly, he began the work, and continued his design with a diligence that seemed to indicate its apprehension (as the report goes) he should not live till he completed it. This, however, he did in the most ingenious manner, by grouping everything which could denote the end of all things—a broken bottle—an old broom worn to the stump—the end of an old stocking—a cracked bolt—a bow unstrung—a crown tumbled in pieces—towers in ruins—the sign-post of a tavern called the World's End, tumbling—the moon in her wane—the map of the globe burning—a gibbet falling, the body dropping down—Phœbus and his horses lying dead in the clouds—a vessel wrecked—Time, with his hour glass and scythe broken, tobacco pipe in his mouth, the last whiff of smoke going out—a play book open, with "excent omnes" stamped in one corner—an empty purse—and a statue of bankruptcy taken out against Nature. "So far so good," cried Hogarth "the deed is done—all is over."

It is a very remarkable and well known fact that he never again took the pallet in hand.

It is a circumstance less known, perhaps, that he died in about a year after he had finished this extraordinary tail-piece.
